

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

"L'Œuvre Creve." The success of Hervey's opera of L'Œuvre Creve last evening was as decided as it was unexpected.

The libretto, which was written by the composer, makes a rather silly piece of extravagance the main incident of the plot. A young lady gets her eye pierced with an arrow while endeavoring to work the tangle of a shawl.

"Ma Pauvre Dindonnette," sung by Madame Rose Bell; "Albion et Chasson," a fine choros, which was given in admirable style; the duet between "Alexandrovitch" and "Dindonnette," commencing "Deja tout mon sang bouillonn;" the legend of the Atmospheric Lobster, "Sur les rives de l'Adour;" the rondeau "Mémorise," by "Lafleur de Noblesse;" "A mes regards volles," by "Alexandrovitch," in the third act; and the duet with "Dindonnette," which follows, are all beautiful, and were heartily enjoyed last evening.

The performance was in every way worthy of commendation, and the great variety of eccentric characters enabled the members of the troupe to distinguish themselves as actors as well as singers. The choruses were sung in a manner not often equaled on the stage of the Academy, and the piece was placed upon the stage in a style of completeness, as regards costumes, accessories, etc., that fully realized all the promises given by the management.

1. Chartered under the Laws of the State of New York and prohibited from engaging in speculations of any kind. Not allowed to underwrite any but first-class risks, and cannot invest its funds except in United States Stocks, New York State Stocks, and Mortgage bonds with double security.

2. Organized on the Mutual plan. Profits annually divided, which may be applied to the cancellation of Loans, to a permanent reduction of future premiums, or to the purchase of additional insurance.

3. Economical and careful in its management, having paid its losses from receipts of interest on investments alone.

4. Names all approved forms of Policies, Ordinary Life, Single Payment Term, Endowment, Joint Life, and Annuities.

5. Rates of premium as low as a proper security will admit. No extra rate charged for risks upon the lives of families.

6. Allows a loan to the assured, if desired, of one-third the annual premium, when it amounts to $40 or more, without requiring premium notes. Loans not deducted from the policy in case of death after three years.

7. Makes no charge for medical examination, policy fee, or stamp.

8. Allows thirty days' grace in payment of renewal premiums, during which time the policy remains in full force.

9. After three annual payments of premium, the assured can, if in embarrassed circumstances, continue his policy for a period of time nearly equal to that in which it has already been in force, by paying merely the interest on the premiums when they become due; or, having paid his premium, he can temporarily loan from the Company a sum, in cash, equal to four-fifths of the net value of his policy.

10. Gives to the assured on any plan, after the third year's premium has been paid, the privilege to exchange for a paid-up policy; or, if the object for which the insurance was effected shall have ceased, will purchase his policy at its equitable value, paying cash therefor.

11. Premiums may be paid annually, semi-annually, or quarterly.

12. Each policy-holder gives a voice in the elections and management of the Company.

13. All Policies and dividends non-forfeitable.
